

Alternative Funding for Meth Lab Response and Cleanup

Recently the Drug Enforcement Agency (DEA) issued the following information: Funding to assist law enforcement agencies in meth lab cleanup and response has been exhausted, and at this time there is no speculation of acquiring additional funding.

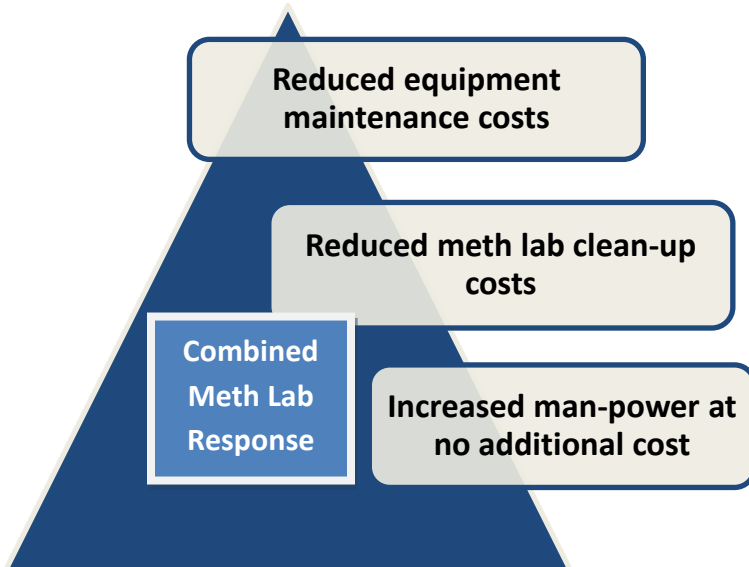

Agencies are already bracing for budgetary exhaustion and may even decide to reduce investigations of meth labs due to the current expense of cleanup and response. The news has braced the public about the exhaustion of funds but what signal does this send the Meth Cooks? Well, they are looking at this as the opportunity to manufacture more meth than they ever have before. MERIT absolutely disagrees with both of these outcomes and furthermore we will arm every community with a specialized team of meth lab responders that will cost 50 to 90% less to operate, as well as, provide meth lab waste handling at a fraction of the cost.

This is not a threat to the Meth Community...it is our promise. We will train teams of response personnel across the United States who will hunt you down; break down your makeshift labs; and take away all that you have.

MERIT Training Programs has certified more than 4500 officers and response personnel to respond to methamphetamine labs. We knew of the budget cuts before they were made public. We did not plan to hide and reduce our training. What we did was design a new training program that would cut the costs of handling methamphetamine labs by more than 50% and in some instances more than 90%. We're ready to turn the tide on meth labs by offering the Combined Meth Lab Response Program. We are looking for training locations.
